Love that Alters.

*Love is not love that alters when it alteration That is one of the sublimest lines in all literature. It is the final definition of love by the world's greatest reader of the human mind,—Shakespeare. Nearly all women who truly love, love in this sublime way Men seldom do.

mind,—Shakespeare. Nearly an women who truly love, love in this sublime way Men seldom do.

Woman's most glorious endowment is the power to awaken and hold the pure and honest love of a worthy man. When she loses it and still loves on, no one in the wide world can know the heart agony she endures. The woman who suffers from weakness and derangement of her special womanly organism soon loses the power to swav the heart of a man. Her general health suffers and she loses her good looks, her attractiveness, her amiability and her power and prestige as a woman Dr R V. Pierce, of Buffalo. N.Y., with the assistance of his staff of able physicians, has prescribed for many thousands of women. He has devised a perfect and scientific remedy for women's allments. It is known as Dr Pierce's Favorite Prescription It is a positive specific for all weaknesses, diseases, disorders, displacements, irregularities, and debilitating drains peculiar to women. It purifies, regulates, strengthens and heals. Medicine dealer sell it, and no honest dealer will advise you to accept a substitute that he may make a little larger profit.

I was afflicted with kidney trouble and I have always had a torpid liver, writes Mrs II. Crosswhite, of Duffau, Erath Co. Tevas 'When I commenced your medicure I was not able to stand on my feet. I used one bottle of Dr Pierce's Favorite Prescription and five vials of his 'Pleasant Pellets' I am now well I had not walked in four months when I commenced the treatment, but in ten days I was able to walk everywhere."

kutomatic Salt Works.

About a hundred miles north of Lima, near the town of Huacho, is one of the great curiosities of nature-a salt factory on an automatic plan. When the tide comes in, it fills a lot of shallow basins, and the water is prevented from flowing back into the sea by closing the gates. The atmosphere is so dry that the water evaporates rapidly and leaves a sediment of salt in an almost pure state, which is scraped up, packed into sacks and shipped to market. Within the coast a little farther the percolation of sea water through the porous rocks into pits and hollows has caused immense deposits of salt to accumulate. The salt is taken out in blocks six or eight inches square and sold in that form. As soon as the salt is excavated the water comes in again and in a year or two has solidified and is ready for the market. Wells driven into the sand disclose strongly impregnated water at a depth of 25 feet, which seems to be a great deal heavier than the sea water, and is drawn off into vats for evaporation.-Chicago Record.

Nothing New Under the Tent. I wandered to the circus, John. I sat beneath the tent and saw the man from Borneo, likewise the tattooed gent. I heard the toothless lions howl, while men in spangled clothes stepped them on the nose. I saw the sacred elephant spout water through his trunk. the salamander eating lead and other melted junk. I heard the merry clown get off the jokes we used to know when we were boys together, John, some 20 years ago. The same old horses waddled round the same old kind of ring, the same old comic vocalists proved that they couldn't sing, the same old hippopotamus was grunting with disgust, the same old Persian ox was kicking up the dust, the same old rheumatic acrobats crawled painfully round, and the ossified contortionist was crawling on the ground and ladies rode barebacked steeds to music sad and slow-the same old girls we used to see some 20 years ago.—Minneapolis Messenger.

Thought He Knew Him.

Dr. Conan Doyle is a methodical worker and a hard worker. He pastes up over his mantelshelf a list of the things he intends to do in the coming six months, and he sticks to his task until it is done. He must be a great disappointment to his old teacher. When he had finished school, the teacher called the boy up before him and said solemnly:

"Doyle, I have known you now for seven years, and I know you thoroughly. I am going to say something that you will remember in after life. Doyle, you will never come to any good!"

Still the Woman Objected.

A certain Dyersburg woman assured her husband she never told him a lie and never would. He told her he did not doubt it, but would hereafter cut a notch in the plane when he knew she deceived him. "No you won't!" she screamed. "I'm not going to have my plano all ruined!"—Tennessee State Ga-

If a man dislikes ten persons, his reasons for disliking seven of the ten are so trivial that he would feel ashamed to see them in black and white .-Atchison Globe.

A Jealous Elephant.

There is a very jealous elephant in the Jardin des Plantes, Paris. The place where he is housed adjoins that in which the camels are located, and a young camel recently introduced has had great attention lavished on him, to the detriment of the elephant, which had hitherto monopolized public favor in that quarter. The elephant grew girl who was caressing his young rival, the huge pachyderm filled his trunk

Love of Liquor Not Hereditary. Professor Sims Woodhead, speaking before the Society For the Study of Inchriety in England, came to these conclusions: He held most strongly that a direct transmission of the taste for alcohol never occurred. Of course he accepted very fully the fact that certain nervous diseases and degenerations involving certain altered and weakened inhibitory powers are transmitted from generation to generation. These, however, did not always assume the same form, the manifestation of the effect often taking on very different characters in different generations.

But whatever character they assumed the result as regards alcohol was inevitably the same, and until far more evidence was brought forward than had yet been presented he should strongly maintain that what was so often spoken of as an inherited taste for alcohol was an inherited weakness and lessened self restraint affecting many other things besides drink and that a direct transmission of the taste for alcohol from parents to children in a constitution otherwise healthy did not occur. As with tuberculosis, the disease was not transmitted, but only the weakly and unbalanced condition of the tissues.—London Hospital.

Where's the Difference?

"So you don't believe in women smoking?" said the little woman as she watched her husband light his third cigar.

"No, I don't-decidedly! If I ever should hear of your doing such a thing, I would get a divorce!" "Well, now, really, John, dear, what do you call smoking, anyway?" "Why, inhaling tobacco smoke, of course.

"But I really don't understand your objection to cigarettes," said she. "Now just look at this room; it is blue with smoke. I have inhaled that into my lungs for the last six years. To be sure, you have held all the cigars, but then -now really, what is the difference? Why would it be any worse for me to hold a cigarette in my hand while I inhale the smoke?"

"It's of no use trying to tell youthere's no arguing with a woman," said John sarcastically. "There's a little use in arguing with some men, though," said his wife. He didn't ask why, but she told him, just the same, that it was because of the satisfaction of coming out ahead .-Detroit Free Press.

The Old Garret Gag.

"One of the favorite properties of story writers is the garret," grumbled an artist the other evening. "The starving genius always writes his great poem in a garret, the poor little sick child never fails to die in a garret, usually on a 'pallet of straw,' and when future great men come to a strange city they invariably live in garrets as a prelude to glory-in short, the garret is the theater of all manner of romance, pathos and adventure in fiction. In real life it is different.

"When I went to New York to study art, I had the great garret myth firmly fixed on my mind, and the first thing I did was to look for a habitation of that kind. I was not especially hard up, but a garret seemed eminently the fitting thing for a struggling artist. To fearlessly into their dens and whacked my great disappointment I discovered that there were no garrets in town. rooms and top floor apartments with slant roofs rented at enormous prices to photographers and fashionable

No Newfangled Stove For Her. A Memphis family which employs an old time negress as a cook recently had a gas range put in the kitchen. When the range was put in place, the workman who put it there lighted the jets inside the oven and then closed the doors. He opened them, turned off the gas and then, relighting the jets, explained to the old negress how the range was used. The jets cannot be seen when the doors of the oven are closed, and in the excitement of the exand forgot the lighted jets. The old negress, after hearing all he had to say, said:

planation the workman closed them

"'Tain't no use ter tell me erbout hit. I'm gwinter use dis yere ele wood stove what Ise cooked on so long."

The workman laughed and went away, not thinking that the old cook meant what she said. She did mean it, though, and continued to use the old wood stove to cook with.

When the head of the family that employs her received his gas bill 15 days after the gas stove was put in, he almost dropped dead. The bill showed that he owed the gas company $21. Investigation proved that the jets in the oven had been burning from the time the workman left. The old cook had never opened the oven doors.-Memphis Scimitar.

Backing Up the Horse.

Not all of the driver's skill is devoted to driving ahead; it takes a good driver to be able to back up in good shape. Not every driver, by any means, can balt and then back up to a curbstone and hit it square and true with both wheels the first clip. That is something that requires more skill than might be imagined by one who had never tried

But in backing up on the level, if a man fails to hit the curb exactly the first time, he can maneuver until he does. There are places where skill must be exercised and where a level head is called for too. For instance in backing up, or rather backing down, into an excavation on the inclined causeway left for that purpose. The excavation is begun at the rear of the lot, and the earth forming the causeway, running up to the level of the street at the front, is left until the last. In the later stages of the excavating the causeway is left just wide enough at the top for the carts or wagons to move on, and its sides slope down precipitously. The driver who backs down on one of these narrow cellar causeways simply must hit it right.-New York Sun.

What the Church Carpet Cost. The Chicago Advance gives the following estimate of the direct and col lateral cost of a church carpet The price was $800, but as the women of the church raised the money by giving entertainments the pastor's estimate was that when all the items of cost were figured in the carpet had cost fully $4,000. He reached this astonishing total by estimating the work, worry, nervous strain, bodily weariness and heartaches of 100 women the heroic efforts of men, women and children to eat the things which were to be eaten and hear, see or buy things which had been provided to extract money from them; the colds, fevers and other allments contracted while attending the entertainments and the consequent doctors' bills; the money spent in other churches, for if they come to your entertainment you must go to theirs, and, worst and most costly of all, the demoralization of the church and the curtailment of the legitimate giving which follow in the train of such methods of raising money. But they got their carpet

Money has been and always can be made more easily out of simple patented inventions than out of any investment or occupation.
